Wages Increased on Railroads

Chicago, Jan. 3.—Wage demands of conductors and trainmen employed on 50 western railroad systems were settled to-day on the basis of an increase of 10 per cent. The agreement was reached at a conference late in the afternoon and the new rates of pay took effect at once.

By the increase granted $5,000,000 annually will be added to the payrolls of the roads involved and 75,000 employees will be affected.

Coupled with the settlement of the engineers' demands last Saturday the present agreement makes a total of $9,000,000 annual wage increases granted by the railroads in Chicago conferences within a week.

The settlement virtually marks the end of the great wage movement begun by railroad employees of the country more than one year ago.

A demand of 15 per cent, was presented originally, and this was scaled down until the railroads offered a raise of 10 per cent.

Includes All Branches

In return for this proposition the conductors and trainmen withdrew demands for certain rules covering conditions of employment and other matters affecting the employees. The settlement includes employees in all branches of the train service.

Every important railroad system operating west to the Pacific coast and from Port Arthur, Ont., in the north, including the Canadian Pacific and the Canadian Northern, to the Gulf of Mexico and Rio Grande is a party to the settlement.

As a result of the settlement the conductors and trainmen employed on the Canadian Pacific are confronted by a peculiar situation. The employees on this road were against participating in the general western wage movement on the ground that they could get more by "individual negotiation" with the roads. Officials of the company, however, sent a representative to the Chicago conferences and accepted the settlement as agreed to by the representatives of employees on railroads in the United States.

Increase Ready For Them

This means a 10 per cent increase in wages of the Canadian Pacific employees is ready for them, dating December 29, 1910 if they want it. Should they refuse to accept they would have to open independent wage negotiations in Canada and try to get more on their own account.

The new agreement was signed by A. W. Trenholm, chairman of the railroad managers' committee; A. B. Garetson, president of the Order of Railway Conductors and W. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

Victory For Coleman

Although the weather was anything but mild on New Year's day, a fairly large crowd witnessed the first league game of the season. Owing to the nets being broken the game was delayed several moments. At 3.20 P. M. the Frank boys were all on the ice and ready for the fray. The game was split into three sections owing to the cold weather.

In the first half the locals played easy. Frank played well and scored the first goal in three minutes. Soon after the locals scored also and tied the score. The Frank players were fresh and worked well together but Coleman's strong defense proved too much for the light forwards. White was there and played a steady game.

At the end of the first stop the score stood 3-2 in favor of Coleman.

The second play opened up with Coleman rushing Frank's backs repeatedly. Only for the good work of the Frank goal keeper saved a tremendous score. During the play, Hughes, Hogan, White and Langer were on the fence for minor offences. At the end of the second play the score was 7-2 in Coleman's favor.

In the last quarter Frank braced up and made things exciting, still they were never really dangerous and when White took the puck from one end to the other they fell back quickly. The final score Coleman increase her lead to 10 while Frank did not score at all final score 10-2.

New Saw Mill

Another spike in Coleman's industrial ladder has just been nailed slowly but steadily. The wheels of progress are grinding out more industries and greater wealth. The establishment of the Pelletier Lumber Co. means much for this town.

In thirty days over two hundred men will be either felling trees, skidding logs, or working in a capacious saw mill in a camp only 2 miles north of Coleman. For years the valuable timber limit north of Coleman has been much sought after. To-day a strong company has secured these claims and a forest of spruce will soon become a thing of the past. There is in sight however enough timber for twenty years' cutting.

On Tuesday seven men hauled the large new boiler for the camp up the long incline to the mill. Everything will be in working order by Jan. 10th. The Miner has since learned that all of the output has been bought by a large Calgary lumber firm.

BRIDE FOR BEAN POT

OLD SURVEYON TELLS OF AN EXPERIENCE WITH INDIANS.

The Women of Rising Sun's Household Came to Admire His Kitchen Appliance, and Finally He Found Himself Minus a Bean Kettle But Richer by One Dusky Dame—The Lady Seemed Pleased.

Shortly after that notorious warrior, "Sitting Bull," had ceased from annoying our American neighbors, various armed bands of his people, called by courtesy "war parties," wandered north of the imaginary line to try and worry unassuming survey parties, or particularly any loose enderfoot that might happen along on the plains.

I remember upon one occasion being in charge of a small party, running a trial line of the R.R. survey across the Souris plains, says a writer in The Toronto Weekly Star. We were delayed by a big storm, and, as the rain, south of the line, I awoke with the sense of some subtle odor which was not there when I turned in. A thick mist in the morning was finally attributable to a tall, handsome savage squatted on his hunkers, calmly waiting for me to wake up. The bouquet came partly from a huge pipe of "kinnikinnick," that vile concoction made of willow bark, and partly from the noble warrior behind the pipe, who was industriously fanning the atmosphere while I was wrapt in the slumber of guileless innocence.

It didn't take long to sing out for an interpreter and have the aboriginal nuisance removed outside, before granting an audience to me distinguished a visitor. The picturesque scout turned out to be "Sitting Bull's" right hand, and rejoiced in the name of "Rising Sun." His wardrobe consisted of an elaborately decorated tunic, a bandolier of Winchester cartridges. The handsome vagabond was on a little excursion up north in Canadian territory, accompanied by a band of about seventy or eighty ragamuffins, with their squaws and dusky progeny, seeking what they might of our.

My camp was in disorder after the pale, lents blown to smithereens, horses stampeded, etc., etc. With the aid of a Sarcee interpreter he informed me that my presence (in my own country) was not generally regarded as to his Majesty, but decidedly objectionable. He advanced the old well-known Indian argument that the game was his, and that he thus prevented him and his tribe from making an honest living. After pointing out to this child of the forest that he belonged to Uncle Sam, and was trespassing on my bailiwick, I did the usual thing, and after the Sarcee introduced him to a generous breakfast which would have puzzled the digestion of an elephant, he, after a night's sleep, I then made him a present of much flour, sugar, tea, and tobacco as a peace offering, and he, through the interpreter, told me that he was closely related to the "Great White Mother" (Victorian era), who possessed more power and authority than his dog did, and would not hesitate to blow him off the map if he wasn't good. With features of assurances, I bid him good-bye, saying, as a parting shot, that I hoped never to see his ugly mug again.

He was congratulated by the grinning half-breeds upon his diplomatic manner of dealing with the noble chieftain. But, alas! for all that, no satisfaction when it comes to dealing with the wandering Nomad of the plains. The next morning dawned with a new day, to find the noble savage once more squatted at my feet. This time I was indeed annoyed, but discretion triumphed and sending for an interpreter, I at first depicted him as an unwashed, hand-painted imposter, telling him that he had broken our sacred contract by daring to show his forbidding countenance again—I also remarked with an air of superiority, his belittling one so closely related to the royal family that the "Great White Mother" would be greatly distressed at the wayward conduct of her red-skinned children, and would probably disinherit the whole bunch, etc.

This speech, being interpreted to him with any amount of half-breed embroidery, seemed to have a soothing effect, but he, still thinking me fully over, the noble warrior emitted a sudden grunt, and told the interpreter to tell me that he wanted to see a proud and haughty race, and was not nearly such a rotter as I had depicted. He didn't want any favors at my hands and what was more would not accept them, in fact, he would admire my style anyway, and much preferred his own. After he sought permission to bring the ladies of his harem into my camp, that they might gaze upon the classic features of the Caucasian ere we departed.

This being granted, that same afternoon a loud jingling of spurs, mixed with suppressed giggling, announced the arrival of the female element in old "Rising Sun's" entourage. Talk about training a carriage, they could give their fairer sisters cards and spades and then beat them at their own game. They poked their noses into everything, challenged continuously, and I expect many of the younger dandies had never seen the fair features of a white man before.

They were particularly interested in the culinary department, and after being fed long about the cook's tent, examining every detail. A particularly beautiful bean pot struck the fancy of an old fat chaperon, who came over to my tent, accompanied by her sixteen-year-old daughter, attired in one single garment, gaudily adorned by the dearest stores of "whitewash." In this particular case it might have been quite true originally.

After manifesting much anxiety and making many violent gesticulations (the old dandy had taken a fancy to one hand and the bean pot in the other), I gave my consent to anything for a quiet life, and, as they departed, they departed with all I imagine my well, consternation, at least, upon returning to my tent to find that wretched old russet-colored chaperon had missed her count and forgotten the dusky daughter, who appeared to be perfectly satisfied with the proceedings.

My young interpreter, in broken English, punctuated by many grins, informed me that marriage contracts of this kind were often made, and entered into through the medium of some such miserable wedding present, and in my case even a measly bean pot would be considered quite legal.

Here I was hooked up for life to a dark bay dame whom I had never seen before, whose language I didn't understand, and to whose family I had not even been introduced, and what was more embarrassing, the chief engineer was expected to arrive any day. What a predicament for a modest, innocent, unassuming church member to find himself in. There was my wild, unkempt, picturesque bridelet, the untutored daughter of a savage nation, who, with the aid of my moment of my consternation, while I could only explain the awkward situation through an interpreter.

This gentleman was immediately despatched to the Indian camp, and brought back with him a brother of mine, who, with the aid of my interpreter, the paternal "teepee," with my compliments and regrets.

DANCES OUT WEST.

Englishwoman Describes Her Impressions For Her Countrywomen.

An Englishwoman in the Canadian West, Gertrude Laird, has written some of her experiences for The London Mail, and we quote what she has to say about a rural dance, and the young men and women who frequent it.

"Dancing is," she says, "a great recreation. The first dance I went to for young people. I, the girl, arrived first and sat in a row along the wall, and at a given moment the young men entered and marched past the girls, and shook hands with each, with the remark: 'Pleased to see you.' Then they began to dance solemnly and slowly to romping or polkas at these dances. Most of the men were boots, none had gloves, and some of the dresses were very old-fashioned. The girls were varied, but all very short, tweed suits being apparently the order of the day. I saw the only one in a low dress. I soon saw the wisdom of a short skirt; the dress was thick in dust, and my long skirt swept it up like a motor car. Halfway through the dance, the girls once more resumed their seats and the young men began to dance with stacks of huge plates and massive cups, baskets packed with large sandwiches, the crusts on, and a varied assortment of cake. A plate and a cup were deposited on your lap, and you took as much sandwich, cake, and drink as you could get to consume. There are also card parties innumerable during the winter evenings, and many of the girls play for hours in boiling hot rooms (80 degrees is considered a pleasant temperature) and some of the girls of them were over 100 degrees. I wore my thinnest summer garments in the winter, and was often too warm then."

"Do not be too insular to conform to the custom. Never start eating at table until everyone has begun. Do not put on your best clothes if you want to go out to a party or get a pound of tea; wear your rubbers and every possible occasion; drink tea with your dinner, learn the proper way to eat and drink, and do not brag about the Old Country."

"In fact, keeping humor paramount, learn to combine the many excellent points of Canadian life with the refinement and homeliness of England. Then Englishmen will make a great mark in Canada, and will cease to be looked upon, as they too often are nowadays, as so many curiosities."

Leopard Hunting In City.

Oh, you fraternities! What lurking is committed for thy fame!

In mid afternoon recently a curious sight was witnessed in the streets of Toronto, turning east on Wilton avenue. Toronto, the subsequent proceedings being of no further interest.

A quartette of sheep-like young men accompanied a very small, shabby, worn-out, and decrepit-looking young man, who, with a leopard's skin bag, was on his way to the city. The young man was wearing a long, thin, and shabby coat, and was carrying a large, heavy bag. He was walking with a limp, and was looking very tired.

Ten paces in the rear marched the fourth man, with a red soldier's helmet and white pants, with a military air. He was carrying a large, heavy bag, and was walking with a limp, and was looking very tired. He was carrying a large, heavy bag, and was walking with a limp, and was looking very tired.

The gentleman who conceived the outfit should write the book for 'The Rogers Bros. at College.'

Plenty of the Weed.

Rescue County tobacco crop this season will likely smash all records both as to yield and value. The crop is a bumper one, as excellent weather this fall saved the situation. The 1909 price ranged from 5 to 8 cents per pound; 1910 prices will be from 10 to 20 cents a pound, which is probably the high water mark in prices in Canada for this product.

Rescue and Kent sugar beet crop is another big success.

Baseballitis.

A WANING SUGAR INDUSTRY.

New Zealand Export Finds It Dying in British Guiana and West Indies.

Any fear of competition with the cane of the British Guianas and the West Indies may be dismissed by the planters of Louisiana. So says Ernest W. Ludwig, an expert sugar chemist of West Indies, New Zealand, but more recently of Demerara. Mr. Ludwig has just arrived, after a tour of the West Indies, where he looked over the sugar situation thoroughly, investigating sugar conditions and the prospects of the industry in settling down on some of the islands. After deliberation he decided to come to Louisiana, where he believes the greatest opportunities are to be found.

Mr. Ludwig is charmed with New Orleans and commented on the activity apparent in the streets.

"Is all America like this?" he asked. "It is different from what one finds in England."

"Much of it I know comes from your sugar traffic, and of course that interests me directly. You people are so progressive. Even in the little that I have been able to see of the means you employ to get results show wonderful energy and initiative. One finds in many other sugar growing countries. In Guiana, for instance, they are behind the times. They are still using the old method of standing the long hours, the steady and continuous labor that the coolie will do. He demands more money for what he does. But with the Hindu, who has come into Guiana in great numbers, that is not the case. The Hindu is a more efficient worker. The third, generation is an almost direct race from his immigrant forefathers."

"But even with the introduction of the Hindu and the advantage he has been to the sugar planter there British Guiana is passing as a producer of sugar."

"The West Indies also from what I saw, says Ernest Ludwig, in the Barbados, where I spent a couple of months, I found pretty much the same condition of things that exist in Guiana. The Hindu, with his intelligence and his numerical superiority there, is killing any chances the cane has of ultimately becoming a factor in the sugar production of the world. Of course I barbed him when I spoke of the islands, but in a way he is right."

"Certainly not! He could not adopt radically different means, copying the advanced methods of you Americans, there is no hope for them. Japan, however, is coming to the fore. In the future, the cane industry will raise sugar and meeting with some success. In time I believe that she will accomplish much."

Praise for Britain. The German explorer, Dr. Carl Peters, has written a book about his latest discoveries in South Africa. Germany has to thank him for his services to the German navy and the author of the Anglo-German agreement of 1890. For some years he lived in England with his wife and children, and he has stated that "the foundation of German East Africa was laid in England."

At one time the doctor had strong views on the Canadian life with the refinement and homeliness of England. He declares that we are "a nation of statesmen—the greatest of all nations."

Foreign critics have complained of English pride. "But if ever pride was justified in any people known to his race," he says, "it is justified in the English. To understand what Great Britain has done for the world, a man must go to the heart of the matter. British Columbia and the gold fields of South Africa, to visit the banks of the Ganges, to see the acts of the Nile. How small appears all the Komans did compared with the deeds of the Anglo-Saxons on this earth."

The Coronation Saltcellars.

Visitors to the Tower of London may possibly recall the beautiful gold saltcellars which constitute a feature of the regalia of the crown in the Jew. At least, they have been used at the coronation banquets ever since the reign of Charles I.

During the late king's reign an interesting old print was discovered at Windsor Castle, showing the design of these coronation saltcellars, and from this it was very evident that for the last 200 years the saltcellars had been used in an inverted position. It seems that the authorities were deceived by the fact that each of the saltcellars in question had what were taken to be feet, but which, in reality, were nothing more than ear attachments to the upper rim. Believing them to be feet, the officials had not only turned the saltcellars upside down, but they had inserted a small silver bowl in each of the hollow discs.

King Edward, whose personal interest in all matters of detail was well known, was most interested in the discovery, and at once sent directions to the Tower commanding that the mistakes of centuries should be rectified.

In 1863 a balloon of 300,000 cubic feet capacity was constructed at Paris. It was named the Giant and was the largest balloon ever constructed. It was used for the purpose of lifting a small two-story house, which was the great puzzle of the world. The house was lifted by the balloon, and was carried to the top of the Eiffel Tower. The house was then lowered back to the ground, and was found to be in perfect condition.

A house in the West Indies, which was built by a man named John, was lifted by a balloon, and was carried to the top of the Eiffel Tower. The house was then lowered back to the ground, and was found to be in perfect condition.

DEVOTED TO PILLOWS.

One Day Should Be Set Aside For Their Cleaning.

"A whole day for the pillows?" gazed the housewife, altogether unwilling to lavish so much time on one article out of a household, but pillows are precious in the estimation of the careful householder, and eight or ten hours spent upon the family supply of pillows once a year will prove any thing but a waste of time.

They require beating with a rattan beater, which will neither cut the seam nor wear the ticking, but if done on a dry, windy day, will clear out almost all the dirt from the pillows.

Another anecdote which showed the innate kindness and gentleness of Mr. Fraser concealed under a bluff exterior was contributed several years ago by a Toronto newspaperman.

The annual program issued by the Toronto Press Club. Under the caption, "A Nova Scotia Angel in Disguise," the story ran:

One of the best tales concerning him had its locale at a political meeting in his native province. The future Lieutenant-Governor was striking the sentimental chord, and was dilating on the boyhood days in an audience largely composed of his fellow-Scot.

FRASER O' GUYSBORO.

How the Big Man Befriended a Canadian Boy in Boston.

The late Hon. Duncan Cameron Fraser, Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia, and a member of the House of Commons, who died recently, was the hero of many stories which had gathered around his name and his picturesque personality in the course of his lengthy and varied career as a lawyer, judge and politician. A giant in stature, standing over six feet in height and broad in proportion, he had a heart and soul which matched his heroic frame. He was a Scot of the Scot, filled alike with the pride of race and the gift of the gab, and his censure was in equally great demand at Liberal campaign meetings and banquets of the St. Andrew's Society and the Sons of Scotland.

One of the best tales concerning him had its locale at a political meeting in his native province. The future Lieutenant-Governor was striking the sentimental chord, and was dilating on the boyhood days in an audience largely composed of his fellow-Scot.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I do not know whether you will believe me or not, but it is nevertheless a fact that at school I was only punished once by the gift of the gab, and my censure was in equally great demand at Liberal campaign meetings and banquets of the St. Andrew's Society and the Sons of Scotland."

Another anecdote which showed the innate kindness and gentleness of Mr. Fraser concealed under a bluff exterior was contributed several years ago by a Toronto newspaperman.

The annual program issued by the Toronto Press Club. Under the caption, "A Nova Scotia Angel in Disguise," the story ran:

As colored and union furnishings are these approved just now, the window draperies that accompany them are of a simple nature—expensive material may be used, but the effect must be that of simplicity; otherwise there is a jarring note. For these colonial rooms the mesh curtain coming even with the window ledge is new. The designs in the cut will give the housewife seeking for curtains an excellent idea of what is new in this line. The election of municipal officials for the year took place and those elected are:

Clerk, son-treas, sanitary inspector, chief of police and license inspectors, J. Sargent.

For medical health officer, there were two nominations, viz. Messrs. Porter and Westwood. Dr. Porter was elected.

F. G. Graham was elected fire chief by acclamation.

The report of the Fire Chief shows that all the hydrants are in good order. Five firemen sleep in the fire hall and seven in their own homes. The Chief asked for considerable more fire appliances which were referred to fire committee. They will be granted. The Chief asked for a change in clause 7, of the by-law, which relates to employing or discharging men. This was referred to committee. Several Councillors were in favor of giving the Chief a free hand while one or two believed the council should have full control.

The Mayor explained that at the last meeting of the Prairie and Pass Association it was decided to send delegates to Edmonton to seek aid for roads, etc. O. B. S. Whiteside has been elected for Coleman. This council was asked to pay for the delegates expenses. Councillors Morrison and James supported the scheme.

Clark-James-That the council approve of the delegations and pay expenses of our representatives. Carried.

Councillor Morrison brought up the question of the bluff. This must be done this year and the negotiations attended to at once. The Mayor also stated that the road should be attended to at once.

The clerk was instructed to write C. P. R. authorities again in the matter.

The pound question was brought up. This elicited a speech from Councillor James in behalf of the owners of horses. He contended that it was cruel to ask a man to pay taxes for horses and then impound them.

Councillor Morrison replied stating that streets and houses cannot and should not be fenced against roaming animals. The days of the Chinese wall are over, he dramatically stated, and we are living in an up-to-date town. Councillor Morrison carried his point as a special committee was appointed to arrange for a pound. The committee consists of Messrs. Morrison, Holmes and MacDonald.

The following committee was appointed to draw up by-laws on poundage, etc. Holmes, Morrison and MacDonald. The town assessment will be commenced at once.

Mine Superintendent

Councillor S. Shone has been appointed mine superintendent at Frank. Mr. Shone has been pit boss in Coleman for over five years. While here he has given the greatest satisfaction. Many friends regret exceedingly the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Shone and family from Coleman.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Another municipal chapter has commenced.

When is the next meeting of the Board of Trade?

Although "hockey fever" is contagious, it develops better in cold weather.

Anyone who runs up against our chief of police runs up against a host of offices.

Four Lumber camps now receive their supplies from Coleman. As a lumber camp centre, we are famous.

Where the Conservative party stands. Can this party be depended on to legislate for the West. Read the following.

Perth, Jan. 5.—Addressing a meeting of the Eastern Ontario Dairy men's association, Hon. Col. Mattheson, provincial treasurer, opposed the sentiment of a resolution passed in favor of reciprocity with the United States in dairy products "Reciprocity will destroy our own industries," he said.

We hope Mr. Fielding, in his tariff speech, reports downward revision of the tariff. The west demands a low tariff, a tariff that will be a benefit to the consumer.

The Mayor and Councillor Morrison have declared themselves in favor of immediate construction of the road to West Coleman. The people of West Coleman appreciate this declaration.

Three names that have already been mentioned for school trustees are, Cameron, Parks and Dr. Porter. With the present members and the above gentlemen a strong board would be assured.

The Nelson News has just issued a comprehensive mining edition, which tells in detail the development of the Kootenays minerals as well as the latent resources. The News is alive to its duty to the industrial centre of West Kootenay.

The board of education is to be enlarged in its membership this January. Not only is this wise provision but a most salutary one, as the need of a larger board increases as the school increases. It is hoped that one or two educational men find a place on the new board. This combination of business and educational experience is a safe one.

The secretary of the Board of Trade will be pleased to receive applications for information regarding the advantage of establishing a steam laundry in Coleman. The time has now arrived when a laundry could make large profits. With thousands of people in the Pass and cheap power and fuel no business concern should let this opportunity go by the boards.

To Oregon and California.

San Francisco is one of the wonders of the earth. Its present almost complete rehabilitation—four years of reconstruction involving an expenditure upward of two hundred millions—is a record of achievement absolutely unparalleled in the world's history and is overwhelming testimony of its tremendous and imperishable vigor. Massive, picturesque, strenuous and thoroughly abreast in the world's great onward march, there still hovers about and around it—always will—the romance and genius of the early West—

The days of old,
The days of gold,
The days of '49

See San Francisco. You will always remember it is worth the cost of any price.

Brief glimpses of Oakland, the bustling Brooklyn of San Francisco, and Berkeley, the beautiful university city, will be possible, if desired, by hurried trips across the bay.

The fifth day is mostly occupied in the noted Santa Clara Valley, the thrifty metropolis of which is San Jose. The scenes there represent the highest development of the fruit industry. An immense basin in the coast range of mountains some thirty miles in circumference may almost be described as one vast orchard and its brilliant blossoms festival in springtime has become an annual event in the festivities of its contented people. The tour of the valley and city, and symposium refreshment at the splendid Hotel Vendome, a bright star in California's galaxy of show places, closes the day most triumphantly.

The party awakes on the sixth in the romantic atmosphere of Hotel del Monte. This establishment is entirely unique in the Western world. It is an immense conservatory of the highest class devoted exclusively to pleasure and recreation—that is, its guests leave all care and worry and business without the outer gates when they enter, and are free to rest or revel, as the spirit doth incline, surrounded by scenes of nature and art that an ordinary fancy does not attempt to describe. The visit includes breakfast and luncheon at the hotel, and a forty-mile automobile ride over the famous mountain boulevard belonging to the estate, through old Monterey, pretty Pacific Grove, and numberless vistas of mountain, forest and sea.

Dinner is served at Hotel El Paso de Robles, some four hours ride southward, and a restful entertaining evening spent in and about the big establishment where the talismanic charm for the banishment of bodily ills is "Sunshine, Sulphur, Mud." A spacious and finely appointed bathhouse, with a most inviting plunge of sulphur water, whose natural temperature is above 100 degrees, is a part of the evening pastime for those who enjoy it.

The seventh day dawns in Santa Barbara, and the summons to breakfast at the elegant Hotel Potter, another of California's stars, will be about the first welcome greeting of that day.

Santa Barbara, though one of the early historic landmarks of California, is nevertheless quite abreast of the times. It is a pretty city of about 12,000 population, snugly nestled on an undulating slope, with the dreamy sea at its feet and the abruptly rising Santa Ynez mountains at its back. From some of the elevated view points the picture is one of gentle slopes, rugged hills garden-like valleys half hidden by semi-tropic groves and in their midst homes of elegance,
